

PROCEDURE

The College writes a Financial Agreement with each student each year, setting forth the terms of attendance. The Agreement is signed by the student and by the person responsible for payment of fees. It is validated by the prepayment of $200. No place is reserved for any student until the signed Agreement and the prepayment are received. The prepayment is not refundable. It is a payment in advance on the student's fee, and is so credited. The Agreement and prepayment complete the admission and make it effective.

The contingency deposit, due on opening day, must be maintained while the student is in attendance; breakage, damage or loss are charged against it, but any unused portion is refunded after graduation or withdrawal. Fees are payable on schedule and if not paid within ten days are subject to the fee for late payment. The application fee must accompany any application for admission, and is not refundable.

The inclusive fee for the eight-week Summer Session of 1949 is $380, subject in general to the same sort of financial terms as the fee for the other semesters. Detailed information will be sent on request.

Veterans planning to attend under the provisions of the GI Bill should write for details.

FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE

Believing that a cross-section of American life, economically as well as geographically, contributes to the educational value of the College, and realizing that ability to pay the full fee is not a criterion of desirability, the College tries to make financial assistance available to qualified students who need it. In so far as practically possible, admission is made to depend upon personal merit. Those who can are required to pay the full fee. Others pay as large a share of the full fee as they can reasonably afford.

In order to arrive at a fair figure, those who cannot afford the full fee of $1600 are required to make an annual confidential statement of their financial resources on a blank furnished for the purpose by the College. On the basis of this statement the Committee on Student Fees grants reductions up to a maximum amount of $600; that is to say, under no circumstances should the prospective student expect that his net fee will be less than $1000.

There is no provision for students' working their way through College. No distinction of any kind is made between students on the basis of what they pay. Their participation in the work program is without regard to their financial status.
